Points of Pride

- The Lights basketball team's recent victories have given Coach Shawn Huse his 200th win at MSU-N. Northern is so thankful for Coach Huse's leadership over the years. He has led many Northern players to many victories. We thank Coach Huse for his dedication and drive. Coach Huse, you make Northern proud.
- Lights player Shaun Tatarka achieved greatness during Northern's 63-62 win over Great Falls January 6. Tatarka's sixth triple, which came at the 13:30 mark of the second quarter, will be remembered forever. The shot placed Tatarka in the 1,000-point club at MSU-Northern. Entry into this point club is a great achievement as only 16 other players have met the standards. Shaun Tatarka, you make Northern proud.
- Success in school often happens with a little support. Student Support Services (SSS), a federally-funded TRIO Program, has been helping students at MSU-Northern for 32 years. The success of the tutoring program in SSS is a Point of Pride. Eleven tutors were available at different hours, and covered subject areas from accounting to welding, with special emphasis on math, science, and writing. Special effort is made to secure tutors for students who are struggling in a specific class for which there is no tutor on the schedule. Thus, we have students tutored off-site, by appointment, in addition to being tutored in our open lab. Of the 47 tracked students, 19 were successful (a C or better, or a W and good grades in all other classes) in the class for which they requested tutoring. Significantly, 32 of the 47 registered for the Spring 2012 semester, including 18 of the successfully tutored students. A retention rate of 68% is a strong indication of the value of supporting students with tutoring and salutary accommodations. In addition to the tutored students, 1069 visits were made to the lab for computer use, studying, or open lab tutoring during the Fall 2011 semester. Northern is thankful for the dedicated workers in SSS. You make Northern proud.

Sax Gone Wild!

The Northern Showcase Concert Association is back on track with their first performance of the spring on January the 26th at 7:30p.m. at the 5th Avenue Christian Church. Saxophobia, featuring Rob Verdi, brings to the stage a who's who of sax gone wild! Set in a jazz format, Saxophobia offers audiences a rare glimpse at some of the most unusual saxophones ever made, and pays tribute to the great jazz legends who popularized the instrument. The show explores over a half-century of jazz and features a range of instruments from a tiny curved soprano sax up to a six-and-one-half-foot-tall contrabass sax, and virtually everything in between.

Hear some classic saxophone melodies such as Take 5, St. Thomas, and Girl From Ipanema showcasing the works of Adrian Rollini, Charlie Parker, Stan Getz, Gerry Mulligan, Sonny Rollins, Paul Desmond, John Coltrane and many others. Add a bit of Tequila, Pink Panther, and Yakety Sax, just for fun and you've got an entertaining, rich and riveting history of the saxophone and the players who gave the sax its unique voice in jazz.

Joining Rob on stage, during the second half of the show, will be the Havre High Jazz Band.

Tickets will be available at the door for $15/adult and $10/students for those who do not have a season pass. MSU-Northern students may attend free of charge with a current student I.D.

What's Your Most Memorable Book?

By Dr. Carol Reifschneider

Years ago I was flipping through the channels on my television and came across the rather new channel, C-SPAN. The program playing at that time featured authors discussing reading and writing. David Halberstam, author of The Brightest and the Best (and other noteworthy books), and David McCollough, author of John Adams (among other noteworthy books) were among the interviewed authors. As the discussion progressed, the question, "Were you always a reader?" arose. Both authors said they did not grow up as avid readers, but at some point they came across a book that completely changed their desire to read. McCollough's most memorable book was Stillness at Appomattox by Bruce Catton.

Reading broadens one's horizons, and it promotes proper grammar and word usage, but often avid readers are not just born. Passionate readers develop through exposure to all types of reading material.

So with that said, MSU-Northern faculty, staff, and students, what is your most memorable book? Please send the title and author of your most memorable book to Library Director, Vicki Gist, or myself, Carol Reifschneider. We would like to feature a reader and his or her book choice in the NNN each week of February. In your submission, please include (along with the book title and author) a brief write up as to why the book is so memorable for you.

Contact Vicki Gist at: gist@msun.edu or 265-3706 or contact Carol Reifschneider at: reifschneider@msun.edu or 265-3768.

Chancellor's Corner

By: Dr. James Limbaugh
Chancellor, MSU-Northern

Public comprehensive universities like MSUN are able to achieve their educational goals through a combination of resources: faculty, staff, facilities, curricular offerings, and community/alumni/legislative support. However, one significant component of ongoing institutional excellence hasn't yet been mentioned.

Institutional accreditation

I fervently believe that institutional accreditation is the single most important asset of any university or college. Without it, an institution loses access to federal financial aid funds and often has difficulty in having its courses accepted for transfer to other institutions.

At MSUN, we are governed by the standards of the Northwest Commission on Colleges and Universities. I encourage you to take the time to review the standards, because they outline expectations of virtually every program and service on our campus; in other words, we all have a responsibility to be knowledgeable about institutional accreditation. Ongoing attention to institutional accreditation will be one of my top priorities, especially as the tenets of accreditation are interwoven into our strategic planning process. To this end we have established two important deadlines. On May 1, 2012 we will have completed a student learning assessment plan. On July 1, 2012 we will have finished a fully-vetted institutional assessment plan (focusing on non-academic units). I want to encourage everyone to assist the committee members and contribute to the completion of these plans by the dates required.

A peer review team has evaluated our Year One Review Report (available on the MSUN website) and we will be distributing their report when we receive it. A permanent, campus-wide committee will focus on the NWCCU standards on a year-round basis so that the drafting and submittal of required reports will become part of the regular cycles and rhythms of our campus.

In closing, I encourage you to visit the "Visioning Initiative" display in the Library. This exercise, in and of itself, provides a foundation for the fulfillment of NWCCU Standard Three ("Planning and Implementation"): "The institution engages in ongoing, participatory planning that provides direction for the institution and leads to the achievement of the intended outcomes of its programs and services, accomplishment of its core themes, and fulfillment of its mission." Provide your comments often; periodically visit the display and contemplate the thoughts and opinions of others. Our vision for the MSUN of the future lies within each of you.

Outlook 2010

Use color to identify mail messages to and from specific people

One way to increase productivity is to use color to identify specific messages so you can spot them instantly in a crowded Inbox. If you use multiple folders, color can help you distinguish messages within a specific folder. Regardless of why you apply color, it'll help you quickly spot messages that are important to you. Fortunately, this process is much easier than you might think using conditional formatting. Here's how:

1. With your Inbox open, click the View tab, and then click View Settings (in the Current Settings group).
2. In the resulting Advanced View Settings dialog box, click the Conditional Formatting button.
3. Click Add and give the new "rule" a name - such as From The Boss.
4. Click the Font button, choose a color from the Color dropdown, and click OK.
5. Now click the Condition button and then click From.
6. Find the contact, double-click it to add it to the From control, and click OK four times.

Outlook will display existing messages from the designated contact in the assigned color. It will also display new incoming messages in red as they arrive.

You could also create a coloring rule for messages sent to specific people - just follow the above instructions except in step #5, click Sent To instead of From.
