Word 2007 Tip: Print a varying number of copies of individual pages in a Word document

Most users know how to print multiple copies of a Word document: Just change the Number of copies setting in the Print dialog box to the number you need, then click OK.

But what if you only want to print multiple copies of a few specific pages in a document? For example, suppose you have a five-page document that ends with a registration form. You only need one copy of the first four pages, but you want three copies of the registration page.

The secret lies in the Page range section of Word's Print dialog. As you may know, by selecting the Pages option, you can specify which pages of a document you want for this particular print job. For example, if you enter 1-3, 5 then pages 1, 2, 3, and 5 would print.

But you can also use this option to print multiple copies of individual pages. So in our example with the registration page, to get three copies of page five and one copy of everything else, you'd enter: 1-4, 5, 5, 5

In other words, each time you repeat a page number in the Pages field, Word will print an extra copy of that page.

It's also worth mentioning that you can also control the order the pages print in with this option. By entering 5, 5, 5, 1-4 the three copies of the registration page will print first.

Oh, and if you have duplexing printer make sure two sided printing is turned off so your copies don't wind up on the backs of each other!

By Bill Lanier

The MSU-Northern Folf course was originally designed, built, and paid for by the campus club Alternative Outdoor Sports (with the help of Virgil Hawkinson, Daryl Thackeray and Steve Hesske). One of the students who helped was our own Assistant Professor Trygve "Spike" Magelssen. The club, met with various people on campus (mainly the physical plant) to get layout input and approval. The MSU-Northern Folf course was originally placed on the Northern campus in April of 2000 with 9 goals/baskets and last year the Folf course was expanded to 20 goals/baskets, making it the fourth largest Folf Course in Montana (based on number of goals/baskets). MSU-Northern and Dawson Community College are the only two colleges in the state that have courses listed on the PDGA website and is one of 32 in the State of Montana. The MSU-Northern SUB has free maps and the MSU-Northern Bookstore has Folf disks for sale.
