Carry a water bottle. Think of how many bottles of water get consumed on our campus every day. Save waste and money and carry a refillable bottle. If the tap water has a funny taste then buy large containers of waters to refill your bottle.

MSU-Northern Foundation: Is it Time For your Checkup?

Almost everyone is familiar with the need for an annual physical checkup. Time takes its toll on some other very important parts of our lives as well. And though it does not receive nearly the attention of an annual visit to the doctor, our wills should be reviewed on a regular basis as well.

Less than 50% of the people in the nation have a will. More alarming is the fact that a large percentage of the wills in existence are either invalid or out of date. Regardless of how you choose to schedule the checkup, here is a helpful checklist of things to consider as you determine whether your will is in good health.

1. Have there been family changes? Births, deaths, marriages and divorce can impact the appropriateness of a will. Do you have family members or loved ones who might be disinherited?
2. Have you moved to another state? If you move from one state to another, the move may invalidate your will. Check for different requirements on witnesses, property holdings, etc.
3. Have there been changes in property or income? Do you still own the property gifted to your beneficiaries? Do you possess the funds to satisfy your personal or charitable bequests?

4. Have there been changes in tax law? It is not uncommon for a major review of wills and trusts to be necessary following the passage of tax legislation. Is your will tax-current?
5. Have you had a change of heart? Let's face it. Things change. Does your relationship with a person or organization require a change in the way you would like your assets distributed?

Like a physical checkup, your will should receive a checkup frequently and certainly in the wake of any significant change in your circumstances. If you don't have a will in place, start the process today. For more information on will planning, please call or write us or use the "Contact Us" button on our web site. We're happy to provide free information that can help.

Computer Corner

By Marianne Hoppe

October is National Cyber Security Awareness Month:

If you access the Internet from a shared computer, make sure you don't leave anything behind

Being able to access the Internet from different locations - a library, a computer lab at school, an Internet cafe - is a great convenience, but it can also pose a security risk to personal information. If you do access the Internet from a shared computer, here are a few things you need to remember:

1. Never leave the computer unattended while you're logged in.
2. Never check any "remember my password" boxes.
3. Then when you're done:
  - a. If possible, clear the browser cache and history.
  - b. Trash all documents you used, and empty the recycle bin.
  - c. Make sure you log off completely by clicking the "log off" button before you walk away.
